Colonel hosts first town hall

By Jim Bennett
Editor

Resident Cindy Stephens had never attended a town hall meeting on Kwajalein, and she'd never met Col. Curtis L. Wrenn Jr., USAKA/KMR commander. But that changed Wednesday night when she sat in a packed CRC Room 6 and watched the new colonel visit with the Kwaj community during his first town hall.

"I was impressed," Stephens said afterwards. "I think he's going to try to understand the issues and do something about them."

Cable television with high quality Internet service and new post office improvements highlighted the 2 hour and 15 minute meeting. The Yokwe Yuk Club figured heavily in the discussion, as well.

More than 400 people attended the meeting, sitting and standing in the room and on the stage.

Wrenn opened the meeting "on a positive note," presenting commander's coins to Dianne Morris, for her set-up work for the change of command and various other projects including the town hall meeting; this writer and Peter Rejcek for recent recognition from the Pentagon for the Hourglass; and Dave Burris, John Brown and Jerry Leverett for their work following the Aug. 20 storm that damaged a number of buildings, knocked out 25 trees and destroyed the traditional structures at the Marshallese Cultural Center.

Before the end of the year, everyone flying between Kwajalein and Roi-Namur will have both an aisle and window seat. And, yes, there will still be room for dive gear or golf clubs for a weekend recreational visit.

Negotiations to lease three 1900D aircraft to replace the Dash-7 fleet are in the final stages, according to Skip MacQueen, Aviation Services

Sea Rogue delivers timber to rebuild cultural center

By Peter Rejcek

Less than a week after the traditional structures at the Marshallese Cultural Center were flattened by a violent storm, packing gusts up to 67 mph, rebuilding efforts are already underway thanks to a fortuitous turn of events at nearby Lib Island.

Missionaries Paul and Michelle Moseley, along with Brandon Skinner, were preparing to leave Lib Friday morning after passing out the last of 340 Marshallese-language Bibles to outer island communities from their pirate ship, the Sea Rogue.

Paul Moseley, left, hands over a log to the waiting arms of Preston Lockridge, right, with the help of Taro Kuli at the Small Boat Marina Saturday. Moseley's ship, the Sea Rogue, transported wood from Lib to be used to help rebuild the Marshallese Cultural Center, which was hit hard by last week's storm.

He said, she said that the sexes will never agree

It seems that I have a tendency to bring up a subject out of the blue or with no warning, according to Peter (the Gecko's friend) and other male friends.

"You seem to be having a conversation in your head, and then all of a sudden you start vocalizing," Peter said, while looking at me as if I had lobsters coming out of my ears.

Inner monologue: "This is the stuff miscommunication is made of. I wonder if this is a male versus female communication issue. After observing the way men introduce a new subject into their conversations, I tried a different tactic. I added, "That [blank] reminds me of [blank]," before launching into a new topic or idea. This tactic did away with the "lobsters-out-of-my-ears" stare.

Many books have been written about verbal communication, or lack thereof, between the sexes. Among the Men are from Mars, Women are from Venus-type books probably lies a solution to the problem. But I was curious if inter-gender discussions were different on Kwaj than in other parts of the world.

The problem is more than just an inability to successfully talk to another human being. Among Kwaj singles, it may be one of the reasons behind the complaint that there are no people to date. If you can't communicate, how can you ask someone out to a movie? For that matter, how will they know you asked?

I decided to conduct an independent survey to find out how extensive this problem is on Kwaj. First, I am required to disclose the methods used for the survey. Sounds pretty scientific doesn't it?

Official survey methods: Actually, one of the great things about conducting an independent survey is that no one else is financing, dictating rules or requiring proof. So with that understood, this is how the survey was conducted.

The question asked: "What bothers you the most about the way the opposite sex communicates?"

The number of people polled: Approximately 30 and about the same numbers of men and women both married and single. The random selection process was based on if I ran into someone in the Café Pacific or with my blue Huffy before the column was due.

Their responses: The responses I list are really the actual responses (although similar answers were combined) without any prompting from me.

The conclusions: Purely subjective, but this is my column.

Now for the survey:

A woman summed up one of the more common female responses, "If he plans something, even if it is just wearing a certain shirt, and I suggest another choice, he takes offense. Then he won't even discuss the original plan he had."

Men thought women took offense too. One comment was, "Every time I mention something about another person, my wife seems to get defensive. For example, I was talking about how fat a friend was, for some reason, she thought I was talking about her."

Conclusion: Both genders take offense easily, for no apparent reason to the speakers.

Quite a few males answered the survey question with, "What communication?" while quite a few women said; "Men don't communicate."

Additional comments about the lack of communication included: "Women don't talk about things and then everything blows up." One man did explain that communicating with friends of the opposite sex wasn't a problem.

Women said, "They sulk," while one female indicated that part of the non-communication results from a hearing deficiency, "Men only hear what they want to hear. They have selective hearing, especially when watching TV."

Conclusion: Whether single or married, male or female, the basic problem seems to be that no one actually communicates anything.

In addition to responding directly to the question, participants volunteered information about how well their gender communicates. The following is combined from different survey participants. See if you can determine which gender said what.

One side said, "[We] use an economy of words. [We] say what we want to say and are done. [They] like to talk around things and expect us to get it and are mad when we don't. We're not mind readers."

The other side said, "[We] like to bounce ideas off of other people. [They] think we're arguing or stating something when we're just discussing ideas. [They] don't like to hear an idea different than their own."

Conclusion: We all think we're communicating exactly what we want to communicate to the detriment of actual communication.

Final conclusion: Kwaj may or may not be unique. But until I get some funding to pursue this line of questioning — maybe even work up some metrics — I believe I've communicated more than enough about this subject.

Cultural Center's ship comes in ...

Rogue. Paul Moseley is the son of local resident Elliot Moseley.

USAKA/KMR officials contacted the Sea Rogue on behalf of Iroj Michael Kabua, traditional leader of the Marshallese Cultural Center, and requested that the ship bring back wood from the joñ tree to help rebuild the five structures that were knocked down.

"Can you get me a boat to go to Namu to get wood for the huts?" Iroj Michael Kabua, traditional leader of the Marshallese Cultural Center, asked Maryanne Lane, USAKA/KMR RMI relations specialist.

Lane said she told Kabua that she knew of a boat at Lib and asked if they could help. Kabua said that he would contact his people on Lib Island with instructions to bring back wood from the joñ tree to help rebuild the five structures that were knocked down. USAKA/KMR resident Tom Lane also contacted the Sea Rogue on behalf of Kabua, to make sure the Lib islanders knew the wood was to be loaded onto the ship.

The Moseleys and Skinner said they were happy to oblige.

"We just happened to be there," Michelle Moseley said.

The call went out to the residents of Lib when Paul Moseley blew into a ram's horn from the ship and alerted them of the need back on Kwajalein. In just a few hours, with the help of a chainsaw, 10 tree trunks were loaded onto Sea Rogue. Unfortunately, the voyage was not so quick. Light winds and the heavy load made the 30-mile voyage take more than 24 hours.

The ship arrived at Kwajalein early Saturday afternoon at the Small Boat Marina. The 10 heavy logs were then transported to the Marshallese Cultural Center.

Lane said she hopes at least two of the structures can be rebuilt for the Mani Day celebration in October. Mani Day, traditionally held on the last Friday of September, celebrates Marshallese culture. Lane said the plan is to host a day of activities on Oct. 2 following a week-long observance on Ebeye.

"It's a big celebration," Lane said.

This will be the third time the traditional structures, which consist of two cookhouses and two longhouses, as well as a smaller building, have been built. The original structures were relocated to the turtle pond at the north end of the island because they were not built in the traditional manner, according to Lane.

The third time may be the charm, as the Lib Island wood is a much denser and heavier material, according to Cris Lindborg, Marshallese Cultural Center director of exhibits.

"I really want to get them back up," she said, adding that construction will be delayed until other materials from the outer islands arrive, such as pandanus leaves for the thatched roofs and homemade coconut rope.

Despite the destruction, handicraft demonstrations are still being held every Monday, from 4 to 6 p.m., according to Lindborg. And, in conjunction with the upcoming Mani Day festivities, a handicraft contest is being held. Entries should be submitted by Sept. 15 at the Marshallese Cultural Center, the RMI office at Kwaj or to Kabua at Ebeye.

Town Hall touches on cable, Internet service

mander gave a 15-minute statement on his goals and priorities.

"We have to run a world-class range and get a 20 percent reduction in cost," Wrenn said. "And I'm going to need all of your support."

With that, the commander outlined his priorities, listing the mission first. The recompetition for the logistics and technical contracts came second, followed by quality of life.

"It behooves me and the contractor to maintain a stable workforce, and quality of life figures in to people staying on Kwaj," he said. "It's more than money."

Finally, the commander focused on the Compact of Free Association negotiations and his "small part in that."

Citing Army Performance Improvement Criteria, Wrenn said the command must operate efficiently as well as effectively.

The colonel then listed what he considered the "hot topics," including price increases for golfers and boat lot owners and the new 1900D aircraft that will replace the Dash-7s on Oct. 1. (See related story, page 1.)

After 15 minutes he cut himself off, opening the floor to the public, during which he announced a plan to survey the community with regards to cable television and high-quality Internet access lines.

The plan, still in the works, would give residents more channels and cabled lines for the Internet. Because of decreasing base funds, however, the move may come with some fees. A survey asking residents what they would be willing to pay for the increased service will come out soon, Wrenn said.

Asked if the command would contract out the postal service, as rumored, Wrenn said it was set to be done, but he decided instead to augment the staff. Then he announced the package pick-up window will open on Wednesdays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Meanwhile, renovations to enclose the mailbox lobby and replace mailboxes are scheduled to begin in 60 days. Though the post office still will not take checks, because officials have no mechanism to recoup bounced check losses from civilians, the office will soon take credit cards.

But much of the focus centered on criticism of the Yokwe Yuk Club and Gilligan's. Some residents argued that recent changes have resulted in diminished food quality, poor service and higher prices.

The colonel said he had set a Jan. 1 deadline to determine if the club would stay open, but has since backed off from that timetable, to further examine the issue and ask the public what they want.

Wrenn added the club receives $300,000 to $500,000 a year in Army subsidies to offset losses.

"We have to determine, 'What's the threshold of pain? What are we willing to pay to subsidize it?'" he said. "If you still want to be able to get a prime rib dinner once a month, or whatever, that's fine, but when we have to raise the golf fees or something else, I'm going to come back with, we have a limited amount of funds."

Sodexo Marriott General Manager Paul King said the club has undergone serious changes recently to address eight years of financial losses. In the meantime, the changes have significantly impacted the staff, and any deficiencies should be reported to the management present at the club.

"All are working diligently to provide a good meal and good service," he said.

He added a gourmet night, set for Sept. 17, will offer residents a chance to enjoy fine dining at the club.

Some residents objected to the $45-a-plate price tag, but Wrenn defended the plan, adding gourmet meals are not cheap.

"They have an outstanding chef, and if you give him the chance, he will cook a fine meal," Wrenn said.

Col. Curtis L. Wrenn Jr. talks with the community at Wednesday night's town hall meeting.

Housing allocations

USAKA/KMR lost $18 million in funding for renovations to the Pacific BQ. Wrenn will travel to Washington, D.C., in September and meet with Congressional delegations to try to gain some additional funding for the base.

AMC reliability

Angered by recent flight delays and cancellations, residents argued for action with Air Mobility Command.

Wrenn said on his September trip he has an appointment with officials at Hickam Air Force Base to discuss the situation.

Who pays for rec services?

Given the price increases at Holmberg Fairways and boat lots, some residents said there was an inequity. The pool is free and tennis is free, but boating and golfing are not. Some athletic teams travel to Majuro in annual games with Marshallese teams.

"Most communities have pools and parks, but I've never heard of a community that offers free golf," Wrenn said. "As for the tennis team or basketball teams going to Majuro, that's part of our role with the host nation and we do things like exchanges to support that."

Concluding the meeting, Wrenn said, "I was told only 35 people attended these things. I'm impressed, and I appreciate everyone coming out. We owe you answers."

manager. The 19-passenger planes could hit the tarmac as early as late September and be operational in October under a best-case scenario, MacQueen said.

"There's a lot of ifs there," he said, noting that there is only a two-month window of transition between when the decision was made in late July and the start-up date for operation. Lt. Gen. John Costello, SMDC commanding general, approved the lease of the two-engine Raytheon aircraft during his last visit here for the change of command ceremony.

As of last week, MacQueen said negotiations were still underway between RSE, Raytheon Aerospace and Raytheon Aircraft Corp. on the final details of the two-year contract. RAC will provide three aircraft outfitted to specifications and Raytheon Aerospace will be responsible for the logistics, such as training, parts and maintenance.

"The most attractive part of the proposal was fixed cost per flight hour for material and for engine maintenance," MacQueen said. "This reduces our risk for escalating material and maintenance cost, one of the prime reasons for having to terminate the Dashes ... They have been a very good airplane, but they're economically burdensome and very difficult to support."

Maj. Matt Reed, USAKA/KMR government flight representative, said the airplanes will meet the needs of USAKA/KMR while avoiding the escalating costs of operating the Dash-7 airplanes over the next two years. He said officials estimate avoiding up to $9 million in costs by operating the 1900Ds rather than the Dash-7s. Those costs including everything from materials to operation, manpower to turn-in costs associated with the Dash-7 planes.

For example, fuel costs alone will go down dramatically, as much as $200,000 a year. Two 1900Ds doing the same work as one Dash-7 use only two-thirds as much fuel, according to MacQueen.

Added Reed, "There are real savings, and people will see them."

Besides the cost cuts, benefits to passengers include more reliable and flexible service once the 1900Ds are in full operation, according to Reed.

Two planes will be flown simultaneously for peak needs, generally the three-weekday morning and afternoon flights. During off-peak times, such as weekends or mid-day flights during the week, only one 1900D may be in operation. However, Reed said that the reliability and cost-efficiency of the planes will likely allow for additional flights to be added, particu-will be made whether we retain any or all of the aircraft depending on the modernization of the range and our fixed wing requirements as we enter [fiscal year 2003]."

The smaller aircraft are also attractive at this point because of lighter load requirements at certain times of the week, MacQueen explained. MacQueen noted flying five people on a 19-passenger airplane at off-peak hours, such as the Wednesday night run, is far more efficient than flying them on a 50-passenger plane.

The 1900D is also quicker. Its Pratt and Whitney engines cruise at 325 mph and can make the Kwaj-Roi run in less than 15 minutes. Also expect fewer fueling delays, as the 1900D is capable of making three trips around the atoll without stopping at the gas pump.

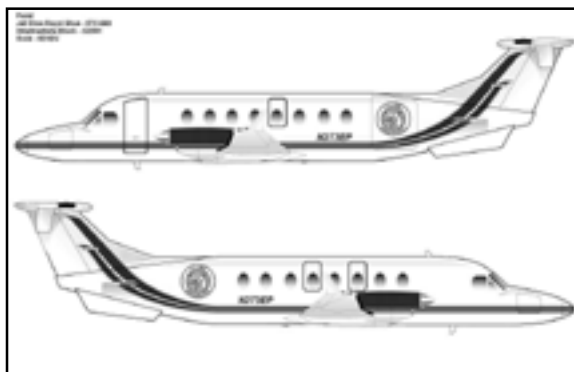

"We'll be operating at a faster pace," MacQueen said.

All three 1900Ds are only three to four years old. Two had been used in a commuter role, while the third has been lightly used as an executive plane. One will be outfitted with a restroom for longer, overseas flights. There is room for about 1,630 pounds of cargo, as well, in each aircraft.

Aviation Services personnel have already begun training for the transition. Two pilots are currently at La Guardia Airport in training, with two more sets of two scheduled to receive training, MacQueen said. A training pilot will also be on island for two weeks. Maintenance personnel are also undergoing training at this time, MacQueen added.

One of the personnel adjustments anticipated with the transition is the loss of several part-time and two full-time flight attendant positions. The FAA does not require airplanes with fewer than 20 seats to have flight attendants on board.

MacQueen said efforts are being made to find the flight attendants new jobs. "Our flight attendants have done a wonderful job throughout the years, both serving and keeping our passengers safe."

The new 1900Ds will look like miniature Dash-7s with a new paint job. The three new 19-passenger planes are expected to arrive on island in late September and be in operation by October.

larly on the weekends to support recreational activities.

"There has been a very concerted effort to make the transition as smooth as possible," he said. "I think [people will] be pleased with the aircraft."

Reed conceded that fewer seats might mean that non-duty passengers may not be accommodated on the flight of their choice.

The 1900D is seen as a key transition aircraft for Kwajalein Missile Range as modernization moves many of the Roi-Namur operations to Kwaj, according to MacQueen. Specifically, fewer commuters means less need for plane seats, particularly the 50-passenger load of the Dash-7.

"It meets the needs of modernization," MacQueen said. "A decision

Tompkins bowls 300 game with new ball to set Kwaj record

By Peter Rejcek

Associate Editor

One new ball. One new record.

John Tompkins unwrapped a new bowling ball and used it for the first time on Aug. 22 for a strike. Well, 12 of them in a row. That's a perfect game of 300 — reputedly the first time such a feat has been accomplished at Kwajalein.

"I like that ball," he said of the 16-pounder.

Bob Carter, friend and fellow bowler, who ordered the ball for Tompkins, told him, "You'll unwrap it and bowl 300."

A network engineer in Information Technology, Tompkins competed on the semi-pro level stateside. Last month's perfect game was the 15th of his career.

"That's a milestone for me," he said. "It just happened."

And it almost happened again Wednesday night, when Tompkins attempted perfection for a second time in just over a week. He bowled a 299 game.

In March, Tompkins set another local record when he bowled an 803 series in the Friday Night Mixed League. That was his eighth time to hit the 800s. Unfortunately, the Aug. 22 series of 635 didn't come close to that record.

"We don't talk about the rest of the series," said Tompkins with a sheepish grin.

Prime Time player Tony Burford, far left, tries to make a pass behind INYAZ defender Todd Archer during Thursday night's A Division championship game. Prime Time won, 57-41. In other action, System defeated the Jablur Hawks, 63-59, for the C Division crown, and Ebeye Puma fell to Pako-lo by a score of 77-56 in B Division action.

Summer Fun basketball season ends with trio of champions Thursday night

By Peter Rejcek

Prime Time held center stage Thursday night as they beat INYAZ 57-41 to capture the A Division Summer Fun Basketball crown.

Earlier in the evening, Pako-lo romped to a surprising 77-56 win against Ebeye Puma in the B Division championship game, while System remained perfect for the C Division summer season by defeating the Jablur Hawks 63-59 in a high-scoring affair.

Prime Time reached the final game of the season by virtue of a 5-1 regular season record. In a defensive battle Thursday night, they kept up the pressure against INYAZ by keeping the ball away. Tony Burford was the top scorer of the game, as well as for Prime Time, with 27 points. Ian West scored 15 for INYAZ.

INYAZ (3-3) and Brickdaddies (4-2) met for a one-game playoff Tuesday. Brickdaddies led most of the way, but let the lead slip away in the final minutes, 44-41.

Floyd Corder led Pako-lo in the B Division championship game with 17 points, while Jo DeBrum was good for 14 points on behalf of Ebeye Puma.

The B Division playoff round Tuesday featured an exciting finish between Ebeye Puma (3-3) and Mandamus (1-5), which took a 10-point half-time before losing in the last moments of the game. Despite finishing 2-4 in the regular season, Pako-lo clobbered H-B-Monnin (3-3), 54-37, to compete in the championship game.

In the C Division game Thursday, Floyd Corder put up 18 points on the scoreboard for System, while Junior Malta contributed 13 to be the top scorer for the Hawks, who led 32-30 at half time in a close game.

System went 8-0 in the regular season, the only C Division team with a winning record. The Jablur Hawks finished 4-4.

Rydbeck brings mission to Marshall Islands

By KW Hillis

Feature Writer

High in the Andes, the Quichua Indian people in Miraflores, Ecuador, have struggled for years to bring potable water, by hand, to their families. Despite no money and the difficulty of bringing water up more than 11,500 feet, fresh water flows from spigots near their homes today, as well as in many Ecuadorian communities, thanks to the efforts of Cherith Rydbeck and her husband, Bruce.

Since her arrival here last Sunday, Rydbeck has spoken to various people and organizations about Ecuador, her life and mission work there.

Twenty years ago, Rydbeck, a teacher, and Bruce, a civil engineer, left Boston to join the nondenominational HCJB World Radio, Health Care Division, in Ecuador. Cherith Rydbeck has worked, ministering through health and hygiene classes, counseling and Bible studies, while Bruce Rydbeck has directed water and hospital projects.

"We have a very holistic view. Jesus really cared for the physical needs of the people. You can't minister to spiritual needs without addressing the physical needs," Rydbeck said.

Rydbeck's visit will culminate this weekend in Majuro, where she is the featured speaker for the Christian Women's Fellowship retreat.

The topic of her speech is, "How to really love your neighbor in spite of cultural differences."

To really love your neighbor doesn't mean doing everything for them, Rydbeck said. To illustrate her point, she described how fresh water is brought to a community high up in the mountains.

"A community comes and asks for our help. Bruce does an initial study to see if it is feasible, and then he asks them to start praying," Rydbeck said. "He tells them that neither he nor they have the money, and they need to pray for God to provide somehow. It's amazing, but the money does get donated.

"Each family has to give six months labor, hand-digging ditches three feet deep for [up to] 12 miles ... The important part is ownership. The people take ownership in the project from the beginning. Since they own it, they continue to maintain it after the supervisory workers leave," she said.
